The African Good Governance Network AGGN is a circle of young and highly qualified academics from a broad range of African nations, aspiring to become future decision-makers. The network, which has been supported by the German Academic Exchange Service DAAD since its foundation in 2007, is dedicated to the idea of good governance and the fostering of democratic structures in society. In line with these aims, the AGGN fellows seek to promote the process of democratisation across Sub-Saharan Africa – be it in politics, economy or civil society organisations. Once a year, a small group of new fellows is admitted to the network, following a competitive selection process.
