

Dear Admissions Committee,

I am writing to express my interest in the Managing Digital Transformation in the Health Sector (ManagiDiTH) program. I graduated from the Technological Educational Institute of Athens in 2016 with a degree in Community Health. However, healthcare was never my first choice. In truth, I was uncertain about the career path I wanted to pursue. While I found the theoretical aspects of my studies intriguing, I quickly realized that hands-on healthcare was not the right direction for me. Directly impacting someone's physical health always felt overwhelming, but helping those that do it, seems pretty interesting to me. I realize there are many ways to contribute to people's health and well-being beyond working as a healthcare professional.

What draws me to this program is its focus on the integration of computers and digital tools in healthcare. Technology has always interested me more than clinical work, and

I see this program as an opportunity to apply my previous academic background in healthcare without the responsibilities of direct patient care. This program will allow me to help people through advances in technology. In addition to that, I am attracted to the online format of the program, which offers flexibility and allows students to balance their studies with professional commitments.

After completing the program, my goal is to find a fulfilling career in technology that promotes better health and allows me to keep learning and growing. One that will benefit from technological advancements and will consequently evolve from them. A work that will have a positive impact in people's health by equipping healthcare professionals and managers with the right tools to do their essential work and eventually participate in managing digital transformation of healthcare.

Thank you for considering my application

Sincerely,
Petros Ypsilantis
